AIDYN MAE'S Story

Aidyn Mae Gottlieb was born with an extremely rare, debilitating neurological disorder called FoxG1 Syndrome. Most patients, including Aidyn, are unable to walk, talk, or eat unassisted and suffer from a wide range of life altering symptoms including: visual impairment, uncontrolled movements, sleep disorders, seizures, extreme unprovoked irritability, acid reflux, and more.

The FoxG1 gene plays a critical role in brain development because it regulates several other genes in the brain. When a person does not have the right amount of the protein created by this gene, the whole body is impacted and prevents normal development. With less than 1,000 known diagnoses worldwide, there are currently no therapies or cure for this condition.

The Aidyn Mae Hope Fund was created to fund research and hope for families in the FoxG1 community.

Rare Disease families need hope, both for a cure/treatment and in their day-to-day struggles in planning, caring and providing for themselves, their special needs children, and their families. The Aidyn Mae Hope Fund is designed to focus primarily on funding aggressive research and treatment for rare diseases, but to do so without neglecting the specific present needs of impacted families.
